

LEGAL BASIS OF SOCIAL WORK

Tkachov M.M., Evlakhov A.Y.

National Technical University "Kharkiv Polytechnic Institute", Kharkiv

The issues of legal support for social work and the modern system of social services in Ukraine are very relevant, especially those related to the legal support of organizational and managerial activities in the field of social work. The legal field of the system of social work, social services and activities of social services is formed in line with the main directions of the state social policy to improve the situation of families, children and other categories of the population with all the positive and negative consequences in their dialectical unity.

Recently, there have been quantitative and qualitative changes in the formation of the social service system, in the development and practice of application of modern legal acts regulating social services. Legal scholars have been faced with the task of conducting an in-depth analysis of the problems of legal support for the organization and management of the social service system in order to show practitioners their real capabilities in this area. The problems of state and legal support for the formation and development of the social service system and the main areas of social work in Ukraine are a necessary component of the theory of social work.

The law in the form of laws and bylaws is of general social importance for the establishment of the social work system and plays a supporting and organizational role in the functioning of social services: first, in providing social guarantees, development of social services from minimum need to optimal sufficiency; second, in reproducing various social services necessary to constantly meet the needs of social service clients; third, in regulating social work technologies in general; fourth, in regulating the activities of social services.

Legal support is of great importance both for the creation and development of organizational and management systems of social services, and for ensuring guarantees of quality service for clients of social services, high quality of social work in general. Legal support is of great importance both for the creation and development of organizational and managerial systems of social services, and for ensuring guarantees of quality service for clients of social services, and high quality of social work in general.

The concept of "legal support of social work and social services" is directly related to the concept of "mechanism of legal regulation of social services". The latter, as emphasized by a number of researchers, covers all legal means involved in the legal regulation of social services, and the relations in which the formation and development of social services, provision of social services to citizens is carried out. This mechanism, in our opinion, consists of the main components of legal norms, legal relations and legal acts, objects and subjects of legal support of the social service system. But for all its diversity and breadth, this mechanism is characterized primarily by the internal connection of regulatory means.